LETTER OF SUBMITTAL.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE AND LABOR,
BUREAU OF STATISTICS,
Washington, October 8, 1909.

SIR: I have the honor to submit herewith the first three parts of a statistical abstract of the principal countries and colonies of the world. In the first part an attempt is made to show the growth of foreign commerce for as extensive a period as can be covered by the published official records of the respective countries. In some cases—as, for instance, the United Kingdom and France—the figures fairly cover the trade development of the nineteenth century; for other countries, such as Italy, the Balkan States, Australia, etc., these figures become available only since the date at which national consolidation or independence enabled the statistical authorities to present the figures for their respective countries as a whole. It has not been thought practicable to present the earlier trade figures for those several geographical units which in later years came to constitute the present national states or territorial divisions. Such figures, even if available, would after all have but an historical interest, and, in some cases, if used for comparative purposes, would prove misleading by reason of unavoidable duplications.

Wherever possible, the movements of merchandise and precious metals have been stated separately, and under the latter head gold and silver also stated separately. Such a differentiation, although entailing considerable work—as in many cases the figures illustrating gold and silver movements had to be gleaned from the annual trade reports—was thought, however, to be justified in view of the purpose of the chapter to give a comprehensive view of the world's commercial movements.

While normally the specie and bullion movements may be said to correspond to and even partly depend on the merchandise movements, still the multiplicity of factors modifying the normal movement, such as specie loans made abroad by the national governments or the great national banks, cash investments in foreign countries and the colonies, war contributions, and the like, seem to warrant the separate presentation of the movement of the precious metals. In view of the partial demonetization of silver undertaken by the leading commercial countries during the more recent period, it was thought advisable to treat the gold movement separately from the silver movement. The figures of specie movements are naturally less complete than those of merchandise movements, as they do not include the by no means inconsiderable amounts of specie (gold mainly) imported or exported by travelers, which amounts are, as a rule, unknown to the fiscal authorities and never made the subject of statistical record.

GENERAL AND SPECIAL TRADE.

For the more important countries the imports and exports of merchandise appear under the twofold head of "General trade" and "Special trade." The transit trade, as affecting but little the immediate trade relations between the countries, has, whenever practicable, been omitted. In the case of some important countries, however, the term "General trade" includes the transit and transshipment trade. These countries are: Belgium, France, Italy, Germany (up to and including 1879), the Netherlands (up to and including 1871), and Portugal.

In the trade accounts of most countries the term "General imports" includes all imports except those which, being intended for other countries, pass directly through the country—the so-called "transit trade"—or are merely transshipped at the port of arrival.

The term "Special imports" includes imports of articles which pass directly into the hands of the consignee (both free and dutiable) and those which are withdrawn from warehouse on payment of duty.

The term "General exports" applies to all articles which are sent out of the country, no matter whether they are of domestic or foreign origin. As a rule it does not, however, include the value of foreign goods merely transshipped outward at the ports of the country or leaving the country in transit.

The term "Special exports" comprises the exports of articles of domestic production. Articles of foreign origin, which leave the country after being changed in form or enhanced in value by further manufacture in the country, are also placed in this class. Colonial products and other duty-free articles, such as foodstuffs and raw materials, in some countries, figure under this head, even though the ultimate foreign destination of such articles may be known at the time they are delivered to the consignee in the country where they are first landed.

In the case of the less important countries the twofold classification of trade could not be given, and the figures of imports and exports appear as a rule under the general head of "Total trade" or "Merchandise;" the latter in case the movement of precious metals is treated separately.

The figures of "net imports" have been calculated for a number of countries (particularly the United Kingdom) for which figures of "special imports" or "imports for consumption" are not available. This was done chiefly to facilitate international comparisons. These figures are arrived at by deducting from the general imports the figures of foreign exports, and approximately, though not quite accurately, represent the value of merchandise retained for home consumption.

VALUATIONS.

The values of imports and exports in the principal commercial countries of continental Europe are calculated with the cooperation of a commission made up of official experts and representatives of the principal industries, who determine the average unit values for the past year. The total values for a certain class of articles are then arrived at by multiplying the total quantity by the unit value as laid down by the commission. This system prevails now in Germany, France, Italy, Austria-Hungary, and Belgium.

For the more important articles the German commission adopts various unit values according to the country from which imported or to which exported. Since 1906 declared values have been used for a number of other articles.

The other system, used by the United Kingdom and the United States, is based upon declarations made by the importer or exporter. Switzerland, while having a commission to determine the import values, uses the second system in determining the value of its exports. Without going into the technical question of correct methods of valuations, it may be stated in this connection that the British authorities take the value of imports to represent the cost in the country where purchased, plus insurance and freight, or when goods are consigned for sale, the latest sale value of the goods; whereas the United States authorities, until the enactment of the 1909 tariff, in ascertaining the values of imported articles for fiscal purposes, took "the actual market values or wholesale prices of such merchandise as bought and sold in usual wholesale quantities at the time of exportation to the United States in the principal markets of the country from whence imported, and in the condition in which such merchandise is there bought for exportation to the United States or consigned to the United States for sale, including the value * * * of coverings of any kind, and all other costs, charges, and expenses incident to placing the merchandise in condition ready for shipment to the United States." In the case of exports the British authorities base the valuation on "free on board" values, i. e., they include besides the cost of the article the charge of delivering the goods on board the ship. The United States authorities take the value of domestic exports to be that prevailing at the time of exportation in the ports of the United States whence they are exported; in the case of foreign exports a distinction is made between goods shipped "from warehouse" and "not from warehouse," the value in the first case being the import value of the goods in question, and in the second case their value at the port of shipment. The European fiscal authorities in determining import and export values, as a rule, include the freight and other incidental costs of the goods to the point where the article crosses the national frontier. For purposes of international comparison, this fact of different systems and modes of valuation should always be borne in mind. From the American standpoint the value of imports as stated by European countries is too high, while from the European standpoint the value of the imports as stated by the United States authorities is too low.

For the early periods the discretion of the customs authorities in fixing the values was extremely limited, as the customs regulations provided for unit values of the more important articles of imports and exports. Thus, for the United Kingdom, these unit values remained unchanged during the eighteenth century ever since 1698, when the trade statistics of that country were organized. It was only in 1798, when special convoy (mainly ad valorem) duties began to be levied upon all imports and exports, that large discrepancies were found to exist between the real values of the exports and the official values calculated in accordance with the provisions of the act of 1698. In 1805 the exports of British produce and manufactures began to be compiled upon the basis of the real or declared values of the merchandise, though in the case of imports the registration of real values was not begun until 1854. The figures showing the trade of the United Kingdom reflect this change of method of valuation in the tables of general exports.

In France the values for 1815 to 1824, inclusive, are those fixed by the official commission of 1820-21. The values for 1825 to 1846 are based upon values fixed in 1826. It was only in 1847 that the present system of annual values for each class of articles was adopted and made the basis of total valuations. The change of system is reflected in the figures of imports and exports.

Practically all South American countries still maintain the old system of official (legal) unit values, though these values are subject to frequent, in some cases annual, revision. Of the European countries the Netherlands is now the only one which still maintains the early system of official values for most of its imports and exports. As a consequence the official figures have to be used with great care, as some of the items are valued at prices which have remained unchanged since 1862 and in no way correspond to current prices of the articles. These and similar considerations should be borne in mind when an attempt is made to analyze the growth of commerce of the leading commercial countries.

REDUCTION OF ORIGINAL VALUES.

All values are stated in terms of United States currency. In the case of the gold-standard countries, i. e., the European countries, except Russia and Austria for the greater part of the period, and most of the European colonies, for which figures are given in the following tables, the rates of conversion used were those given by the United States Director of the Mint. The rates for the Russian credit ruble, in terms of which the original values are stated for the greater part of the period, are based upon valuations published by the Russian authorities. For Austria-Hungary the value of the gulden up to the year 1872 was calculated at the rate of 48.665 cents, equal to 2 shillings; beginning with 1873 the original values were reduced on the basis of estimates made by the Director of the Mint for the silver gulden, and for the years 1891 to 1895, inclusive, at rates kindly furnished by the Austrian authorities. For the other silver-standard countries the valuations of the United States Director of the Mint were used. Exchange rates proper were as a rule disregarded, except that in the case of countries on a paper-currency basis, such as Brazil and several other American countries, these rates were used as a basis for converting the original values.

COUNTRY OF ORIGIN AND DESTINATION.

The second part of the abstract presents the imports and exports by countries of origin and destination. In the trade accounts of the leading countries, as a rule, goods brought into the country are not traced back to the country where they were produced, nor do these accounts state in the case of exports the ultimate destination of the articles, i. e., the country where the goods are consumed. The general practice designates as the country of origin that country where the goods were purchased and which appears in the invoice or bill of lading. Similarly, the country to which, according to the declaration of the exporter, the goods are shipped is regarded as the country of destination. Wherever proof of the origin of goods or of the country of original shipment is wanting, the goods are necessarily credited to the country of the last transshipment or to the contiguous country through which imported. Similarly, in the case of exports, goods are often credited to the country where the transshipment takes place or to the contiguous country through whose territory the goods are passing.

In the trade accounts of the United Kingdom prior to 1904 imports were credited generally to the country whence they were shipped direct to the United Kingdom. Although efforts were made to trace the more important imports back to the actual countries of first shipment, yet in the absence of "certificates of origin" of imported goods this was not always possible. As a result, countries such as Switzerland and Bolivia, which have no seaboard, did not figure in the returns at all, merchandise imported from these States being credited to the country containing the port of last shipment. The same practice was followed in the case of exports, which were charged to the country in which the port of first discharge is situated. In the case of shipments originating in Russia, Germany, Austria, Italy, and the West Indies, which reach the United Kingdom by way of ports outside the country of original shipment, the imports were credited by the British authorities, as a rule, to the country in which the port of last shipment is located. Since 1904, however, separate statements have been published by the British authorities regarding the actual countries from which goods imported into the United Kingdom were consigned, and regarding the countries to which exported goods were consigned. Exports from the United States to countries having no direct steamship connections with American ports also appear understated in the United States accounts, whereas exports to countries containing the respective ports of discharge whence the goods are forwarded, either by land or water, to the ultimate country of destination as a rule are overstated. Thus the exports from the United States to Austria-Hungary, Russia, and Switzerland are understated, while those to the United Kingdom and Germany are overstated in the United States accounts. Generally a more correct idea of the trade relations between two countries can be obtained from a study of their respective import figures than from their export figures.

Another source of statistical inaccuracy under this head is the fact that in some cases, especially of exports of staple articles, such as coal, cotton, sugar, etc., the ultimate destination of the goods exported is not known at the time of shipment. Such goods appear in the trade accounts either with destination marked "Unknown" or else "Shipped for orders." The value of articles thus shipped constitutes over one-third of the entire exports from Argentina and is also quite considerable in the case of goods exported from the Dutch East Indies.

The figures presented in the second part, so far as the European countries are concerned, relate to the merchandise movement only. In the case of most extra-European countries it has been found impossible to show the same movement, and their figures of imports and exports by countries of origin and destination include the movement of the precious metals. Wherever the figures relate to total trade, including the movement of gold and silver, the fact is noted in footnotes to the tables.

IMPORTS AND EXPORTS BY ARTICLES.

The third part of the abstract presents the trade of the leading countries and colonies by principal classes of articles. These articles have been grouped more or less uniformly in accordance with the classification adopted in the trade accounts of the United States. This involved the complete rearrangement of the trade figures of most countries. The new arrangement is not supposed to meet the oft-expressed desire for a uniform classification of the imports and exports of all countries. The aim has been merely to arrange the foreign material in a manner which experience has proved to be most suitable to the requirements of the business interests of this country and which may therefore facilitate the use of this volume by the persons who are most likely to consult it. It is hoped that the new abstract dealing with commercial and industrial conditions in foreign countries may thus become in time a companion volume to the Statistical Abstract of the United States. In order to increase the practical usefulness of the new publication, all foreign weights, measures, and currency have been expressed in terms of United States equivalents. Items likely to be of interest to the American importer or exporter have been specified even when they happen to be only of secondary importance in the trade accounts of the foreign countries.

The figures in the second and third parts cover, as a rule, the special trade movements for the period 1896 to 1906. Only for the United Kingdom are reexports of foreign and colonial merchandise stated in addition to the domestic exports.

SUBSEQUENT CHAPTERS OF THE ABSTRACT.

The Bureau has in preparation further parts of the abstract, dealing with the area and the growth of population of the principal countries, and the production of the leading staples, including the principal agricultural and mineral products. Another part contemplated will contain the principal navigation statistics for the leading countries and ports. It is also proposed to present the principal data regarding the public revenues and expenditures, the growth of public debts, the principal monetary and banking statistics, etc. In future issues of the abstract statistics will be given also regarding the growth of railways, telegraphs, and other means of communication.

The preparation of this work, under the general direction of the Chief of the Bureau of Statistics, has been in immediate charge of Mr. Morris Jacobson, of this Bureau, whose familiarity with the statistical methods and official publications of the various foreign countries, and the languages in which they are published, has enabled him to direct intelligently the work of the corps of experts engaged in translating the statements of the various official documents from which the information was obtained, and transforming their statements of quantities and values into terms familiar to the people of the United States, for whose especial information this volume has been prepared. This work of transforming commercial statistics expressed in the language, currency, weights, and measures of the various foreign countries to which these statistics relate has been one requiring painstaking care and attention, and has occupied for several years the time of the limited force which the Bureau was able to assign to this important task.

Respectfully,

O. P. AUSTIN,
Chief of Bureau.

To HON. CHARLES NAGEL,
Secretary of Commerce and Labor.

^aPrior to 1891 the official returns divided the movement of coin into three classes: "Gold coin," "Silver coin," and "Gold and silver coin" combined. This third item is included in the columns headed "Gold and silver," but is necessarily excluded from those headed "Gold" and "Silver," respectively. For this reason the figures appearing in the former columns exceed the sum of those in the latter during the years 1858-1890, inclusive.

^a Total trade to 1887, inclusive; imports for consumption and exports of domestic goods in later years, the items marked "temporary" and "goods returned" in the Spanish trade returns having been excluded from the totals after 1887.

^b The figures in the columns headed "Gold and Silver," for some years, do not represent the sum of the figures in the "Gold" and "Silver" columns, for the reason that in certain items of the Spanish returns the two metals are not separated. Broken gold and silver are not included under previous metals but under merchandise.

^a The import figures for the years 1873, 1874, and 1875 are from Romero's Geographical and Statistical Notes on Mexico; all other figures are from official records. In the case of imports prior to 1903 the original figures are given in terms of gold pesos, which were taken as equivalent to United States dollars; in the case of exports prior to 1906 the original values are stated in terms of silver pesos, which were reduced to United States dollars by using the estimates of the Director of the United States Mint. Beginning with the fiscal year 1906, both imports and exports are stated in the original returns in terms of pesos of 49.8 cents.

^b The values of the gold exports for the years 1873 to 1905, inclusive, as originally stated, have been reduced to United States currency at the rate of 1 peso=$0.984.

^c No data available.

^d Total trade. Figures for 1883 to 1893 and for 1896 to 1906 from the official Resúmenes Estadísticos; figures for 1895 to 1898 from the Memorias de Hacienda.

^a Total trade. Compiled from Boletín de la Oficina Nacional de Inmigración: Estadística y Propaganda Geográfica, and British Diplomatic and Consular Reports No. 3758. Conversions of the boliviano trade rates furnished by the Director of the Mint, as follows: 1900, 44.8 cents; 1901, 43.2 cents; 1902, 38.2 cents; 1903, 39.2 cents; 1904, 41.9 cents; 1905, 44.1 cents; 1906, 49 cents; 1907, 47.9 cents.

^b Total trade. Data for the years 1834 to 1900, inclusive, taken from the official "Bulletin Commémoratif de l'Exposition Nationale de 1908." Figures for 1901 and subsequent years are taken from the official Brazilian trade statistics. The original figures, expressed in terms of milreis have been converted to United States dollars on the basis of rates of exchange on London given in the above publication. For the years 1834 to 1887 figures relate to the fiscal year ending June 30; for 1887 (2) figures are for the six months ending December 31. All subsequent figures are for the calendar-year period.

^c Merchandise only. For the movement of gold and silver, see section 3, Brazil.

^a The Chilean peso has been taken as equivalent to the United States dollar for the period to 1884; to 77 cents from 1885 to 1896, and to 36.5 cents since 1897. Data for the period prior to 1890 taken from the Resumen de la Hacienda Publica de Chile, 1901 (Spanish and English); for the years 1890 to date, the figures are those of the Annual Estadística Comercial de la Republica de Chile.

^b Total trade. Values up to 1891 stated mostly in currency, in subsequent years mostly in gold; for this reason no attempt has been made to reduce the original values to terms of American currency. No figures available for the period 1899 to 1905, inclusive. The trade of the free ports, Panama and Colon, does not figure in the above table.

^c No data available.

^a Imports of dutiable and free goods re-exported overland to States outside the South African Customs Union, or to States within the Customs Union, are not included in the table. Goods so re-exported for the interior are included in the statement of imports. The value of gold (the produce of South African States) brought overland into the colony for shipment at Cape ports is not included in the returns of imports, though included in those of exports.

^b Goods so imported for the interior are included, but goods imported overland are excluded. The overland imports, so far as recorded, amounted to $24,000 in 1899, $797,000 in 1900, $1,000,000 in 1901, and $1,001,000 in 1902. The value of gold (the produce of South African States) brought overland into the colony for shipment at Natal ports is included in the returns of exports, though not in those of imports. Figures are inclusive of imports and exports of bullion and specie.

^c The figures for 1900 include inter-state trade by sea (i. e., Cape of Good Hope), which were included in 1905 and prior years.

^a The German Customs Union includes, besides the territory of the German Empire proper, the Grand Duchy of Luxembourg and the two Austrian communes of Jungblatz and Mitterbach. The free port of Hamburg, Cuxhaven, Bremen, and Geestemünde, the island of Helgoland, and a few frontier districts in Baden (Zollanschlüsse) are not included in the Union. Since March 1, 1906, the above four free ports have been treated for statistical purposes as part of the Union, which has been called since then the German Customs Union. (Wirtschaftsgebiet.) Owing to changes in classification beginning with March 1, 1906, the data for that year are not strictly comparable with those for earlier years.
